INVITATION

On Wednesday, 20th October 2010, World Statistics Day will be celebrated. The theme of the commemorations is the many achievements of statistics: service, professionalism and integrity.

The International Statistical Institute (ISI) drew the attention of national statistical offices, national statistical associations, and organisations of the professional scientific community and teachers of statistics in a circular letter to suitably celebrate the first World Statistics Day.

The Hungarian Central Statistical Office, The Committee on Statistics of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences and the Hungarian Statistical Association together planned the series of programmes for year 2010.

We kindly ask you to encourage people involved and interested in statistics to participate in the programmes of the World Statistics Day in as large a number and as actively as possible.
